L.O.

To be able to use hyphens where necessary to make words and writing clear.

Success Criteria

- I can identify where and why hyphens are used in a text.
- I can recognise where a hyphen should be used.
- I can explain how hyphens can be used in different ways to make meaning clear.
- I can re-write a sentence using a hyphen to avoid ambiguity.

A hyphen is a punctuation mark that looks like a little horizontal line.

Hyphens join together words or parts of words.

E.g. small-scale, re-formed.

Hyphens are very useful as they can help to clarify the meaning of a word or phrase and avoid ambiguity in writing. Look at the example below:

Paula decided to resign from her job.

Steve re-signed his contract.

Read the story about Lucy.

Lucy

I can identify where and why hyphers are used in a test.

Read the story below and highlight all the examples of hyphens you can find. Make notes about why you think the hyphens have been used.

Lucy

I know the mannert I opered my eyes that it was going to be a bad day. Somehow, I acuid just feel it. I rolled over and looked at the stock eight twenty-five, far too early to be assiste on a Saturday! I there back my hot-piels duver and sot up, yourning widely I reached for my mobile. I wondared if Jode had got the message I resent yesterday but them was no reply from her so I figured she hadn't, either that or she hadn't had a chance to text back. I poldered across to my wandrobe and pulled out a pair of black jeass, but where was my new top? Jessie! I but she had picched at aiready. My mood dischered intentily. I stompted down to headfast and found my femily in a crossoust and jam free-for-all. Nothing new there. Why were they not able to acoperate nicely like a normal family? Even Rover the day, who was splattered with jam, were previling around on his hear-like power as he always does, jumping up to catch any crumbs that were flung his way. "Hey!" I called, struggling to be heard above the reachs. "HEY!" The noise de-escalated and overyone turned to regard no. "On, good moming deer," my num regleck! "Sleep well?"

"Not especially," I grumbled. "Jessie, when's my new skeleton-head top?" Jessie grinned at me through study teeth. She was stupendously good at winding me up.

"Hown't soon it," she answered in a sevent singeong voice. My sister was an outcard-out for and I was determined to not let her get the better of mel However, before I could reply the answerphone tone on may phone rang out. An answerphone message? I hadn't even heard it ring. I didn't recognise the number which had called but I represend the niessage upon and put the phone to my out to listen.

"Larg, it's Mr Foress," the voice on the other and of the phone declared. Mr Foresse? Why is our new student-outher calling me over the weekend? "Larg it's almost half past sight and your science exam, starts in fifteen minutes. Where are you?"

My heart thumped "Marn... what day is it?" I asked tentatively, beginning to realise that perhaps it wasn't Saturday after all...

Can you highlight all of the hyphens in the text (-)?

Can you explain why you think a hyphen has been used in that way?

I knew the moment I opened my eyes that it was going to be a bad day. Somehow, I could just feel it. I rolled over and looked at the clock: eight twenty-five, far too early to be awake on a Saturday! I threw back my hot-pink duvet and sat up; yawning widely I reached for my mobile. I wondered if Jade had got the message I re-sent yesterday but there was no reply from her so I figured she hadn't, either that or she hadn't had a chance to text back. I padded across to my wardrobe and pulled out a pair of black jeans, but where was my new top? Jessie! I bet she had pinched it already. My mood darkened instantly. I stomped down to breakfast and found my family in a croissant and jam free-for-all. Nothing new there. Why were they not able to co-operate nicely like a normal family? Even Rover the dog, who was splattered with jam, was prowling around on his bear-like paws as he always does, jumping up to catch any crumbs that were flung his way. "Hey!" I called, struggling to be heard above the racket. "HEY!" The noise de-escalated and everyone turned to regard me. "Oh, good morning dear," my mum replied. "Sleep well?"

"Not especially," I grumbled. "Jessie, where's my new skeleton-head top?" Jessie grinned at me through sticky teeth. She was stupendously good at winding me up.

"Haven't seen it," she answered in a sweet sing-song voice. My sister was an out-and-out liar and I was determined to not let her get the better of me! However, before I could reply the answerphone tone on my phone rang out. An answerphone message? I hadn't even heard it ring. I didn't recognise the number which had called but I re-pressed the message icon and put the phone to my ear to listen.

"Lucy, it's Mr Farrow," the voice on the other end of the phone declared. Mr Farrow? Why is our new student-teacher calling me over the weekend? "Lucy it's almost half past eight and your science exam starts in fifteen minutes. Where are you?"

My heart thumped. "Mum... what day is it?" I asked tentatively, beginning to realise that perhaps it wasn't Saturday after all...

Did you spot all the hyphens? Let's check!

Lucy

I knew the moment I opened my eyes that it was going to be a bad day. Somehow, I could just feel it. I rolled over and looked at the clock: eight twenty-five, far too early to be awake on a Saturday! I threw back my hot-pink duvet and sat up; yawning widely I reached for my mobile. I wondered if Jade had got the message I re-sent yesterday but there was no reply from her so I figured she hadn't, either that or she hadn't had a chance to text back. I padded across to my wardrobe and pulled out a pair of black jeans, but where was my new top? Jessie! I bet she had pinched it already. My mood darkened instantly. I stomped down to breakfast and found my family in a croissant and jam free-for-all. Nothing new there. Why were they not able to co-operate nicely like a normal family? Even Rover the dog, who was splattered with jam, was prowling around on his bear-like paws as he always does, jumping up to catch any crumbs that were flung his way. "Hey!" I called, struggling to be heard above the racket. "HEY!" The noise de-escalated and everyone turned to regard me. "Oh, good morning dear," my mum replied. "Sleep well?"

"Not especially," I grumbled. "Jessie, where's my new skeleton-head top?" Jessie grinned at me through sticky teeth. She was stupendously good at winding me up.

"Haven't seen it," she answered in a sweet sing-song voice. My sister was an out-and-out liar and I was determined to not let her get the better of me! However, before I could reply the answerphone tone on my phone rang out. An answerphone message? I hadn't even heard it ring. I didn't recognise the number which had called but I re-pressed the message icon and put the phone to my ear to listen.

"Lucy, it's Mr Farrow," the voice on the other end of the phone declared. Mr Farrow? Why is our new student-teacher calling me over the weekend? "Lucy it's almost half past eight and your science exam starts in fifteen minutes. Where are you?"

My heart thumped. "Mum... what day is it?" I asked tentatively, beginning to realise that perhaps it wasn't Saturday after all...

Did you work out that hyphens are used to clarify the meaning of the word?

Did you notice that words containing hyphens have no spaces?

What specific roles did the different hyphens have?

re-sent

Hyphen used to clarify the meaning of the word.

bear-like

Hyphen used to create compound adjective.

free-for-all

Hyphen used to join words to create an informal word.

hot-pink

Hyphen used to create a compound adjective.

twenty-five

Hyphen used in a written number between 21 and 99.

answerphone

Hyphen used to indicate that the word continues on the next line.

de-escalated

Hyphen used to avoid an awkward letter combination - the 2 e vowels.

Hyphen used to avoid an awkward letter combination

co-operate

the two o vowels.

sing-song Hyphen used to join words to create an informal phrase.

skeleton-head

Hyphen used between two nouns to create an adjective.

re-pressed

out-and-out

Hyphen used to join words to create an informal phrase.

student-teacher Hyphen used between two nouns to create a new noun.

Hyphen used to clarify the meaning of the word.

Creating a Compound Adjective

Hyphens can be used to link two separate words into a compound adjective before a noun.

The terrier padded across the room on its bear-like paws.

Georgina hung her hot-pink coat on the hook.

Joining two nouns

Hyphens can be used to join together two nouns of equal importance to create a new noun or adjective.

Dan hung up a skeleton-head garland on Halloween.
(This creates an adjective.)

The student-teacher taught the children about hyphens.

(This creates a new noun.)

Avoiding Awkward Letters or Sound Combinations

Hyphens can be used to avoid combining letters and sounds which could be awkward to say or write without a hyphen.

The children seemed incapable of co-operating with each other.

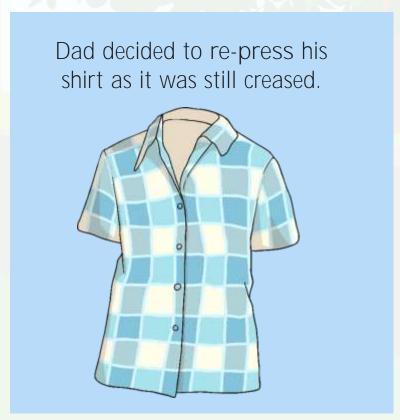

Hyphens are often used in this way to join prefixes to words when the prefix ends and the word starts with a vowel.

Clarifying a Word Meaning

Hyphens can be used to ensure that the meaning of a word is clear. In these examples the words could mean different things without the hyphens.

Bill requested that the email be re-sent.

In Numbers

Hyphens should be used to join the tens and units in written numbers 21 – 99.

Sam came first in the marathon in which one hundred and twenty-seven people raced.

There are thirty-two known species of fish in our school pond.

Splitting a Word

Hyphens can be used to indicate that a word is not finished at the end of a line of writing.

Fiona thought that the new James Bond film was stupendously enjoyable.

The waiters were asked to provide some light entertainment after the meal.

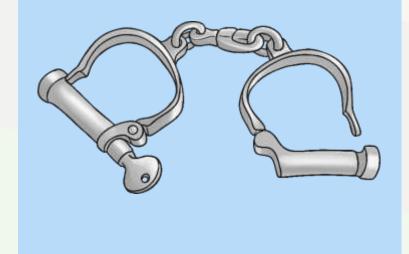

Make sure the word is split in a sensible place if using a hyphen this way.

Create Informal Words/Phrases

Hyphens can be used in informal phases to link words which go together to create a unit of meaning.

The man is an out-and-out thief.

Avoiding Ambiguity

Hyphens can be used to avoid ambiguity in sentences. That means they help to make the meaning of the sentence clear.

Read these two sentences.

There was a man eating shark in the bay.

There was a man-eating shark in the bay.

Why is the first sentence ambiguous?

How does the hyphen in the second sentence help to make the meaning clear?

Complete the Avoiding Ambiguity Activity Sheet.